Course content The masterstudios provide the main skills in the field of architectural, building and urban design. They function as laboratories which question standard conventions in architecture and urban planning. Their research-based approach includes practical as well as theoretical aspects.

The students are asked to propose an architectural or urban project for a given site and program. During one semester semester they learn how to develop this proposal consistently from the first conceptual idea to the technical detail, from the big scale to the small scale.

The final exam includes an oral presentation of the design proposal with drawings and models according to the requirements listed in the module catalogue of the Master’s Degree Program.
